

John Miall

John Miall retired from the City of Asheville in 2005 after a 30 year career that spanned Human Resources, Benefits Management, and as Director of Risk Management. In 2000 he was named an “Honorary Member of the American Pharmacists Association (APhA.) In 2003 he received a “Benny Award” from Employee Benefit News for Outstanding Benefit Design.” In 2004 he was named “Public Risk Manager Of The Year by The Public Risk and Insurance Management Association (PRIMA.)

As Director of Risk Management for The City of Asheville, Miall held major operational and budget responsibility for city-wide self-funded liability programs including $16million program for general, auto, public officials, law enforcement, and dams liability; $10 million annual group benefits program; $2million worker's compensation program; and four separate retirement programs, two of them self-funded and self-administered.

In 1997 John was one of a group of “visionaries” behind what became known as “The Asheville Project®.” Since retirement he has owned “Miall Consulting” and has worked with clients around the United States and Canada as a public speaker and benefit consultant. Among his clients are APhA and HealthMapRx / Mirixa.

John works with agents, brokers, employers, coalitions and the pharmaceutical industry to improve patient care and reduce costs of care through realignment of incentives for care plans. John is a graduate of Montreat-Anderson College and the University of North Carolina at Asheville, and has completed studies at The School of Municipal Administration at UNC-Chapel Hill.

He is highly sought internationally as a speaker and presenter on risk management and health care innovations.
